ターゲット情報

関連性

The genus Listeria comprises six species: L. monocytogenes, L. innocua, L. welshimeri, L. seeligeri, L. ivanovii and L. grayi. Listeria monocytogenes, the most commonly isolated pathogenic member, is associated with a wide spectrum of human and animal diseases. In the smear from the original tissue, L. monocytogenes may appear as gram-positive coccobacilli that may be confused with Streptococcus agalactiae (group B), enterococci, or Corynebacterium spp. Listeria is differentiated from streptococci by a positive catalase test. L. monocytogenes is the only species of the genus Listeria that has been clearly documented as a pathogen for humans. The forms of disease caused by this organism are myriad and age-related. The most common clinical manifestations are meningitis and septicemia. Listeria monocytogenes, a food-borne intracellular animal and human pathogen, interacts with infected host cells both prior to entry and during the intracellular phase of infection.

Immunohistochemistry (Frozen sections) - Biotin Anti-Listeria monocytogenes antibody (ab20766) This image is a courtesy of Anonymous Abreview ab20766 staining Listeria monocytogenes in mouse spleen tissue section from a mice infected with 1x10exp6 L. monocytogenes for 24h by Immunohistochemistry (Frozen sections). Tissue samples were fixed with 4% paraformaldehyde for 2 hours at RT and then it was incubated ON in 30% Sucrose in PBS at 4°C, froze away in OCT/Tissuetek. The tissue samples were blocked with 1% 1:20 Cd16/32 at 20°C for 30 minutes. The sample was incubated with primary antibody (1/250) in PBS at 20°C for 1 hour. For detection Streptavidin-Cy3 was used at dilution at 1:500 in PBS for 30 min at 20°C.
